Its colonial old town was the first location in the world to be designated as a UNESCO World Heritage site. Altogether the city has to offer 86 churches and monasteries of the 16th and 17th century. Due to its beautiful churches and monasteries, Quito is known as the “Convent of America”. This attractive city is located only 22 km (13, 7 mi) away from the “Middle of the World”, the Equatorial Line.*

Guayaquil

Ecuador’s largest city Guayaquil is the industrial and commercial center of the country and home to over 2, 5 million people. It is situated on the western banks of the Río Guayas, about 35 miles from its outflow into the Gulf of Guayaquil. The Pacific Ocean enters through the gulf of Guayaquil into the city’s harbor. Guayaquil’s port is the main door to 90% of all Ecuadorian imports as well and half of its exports. The climate is hot in the first semester of the year and a nice cool breeze blows the rest of it. In the recent past the city has seen some great changes with the construction of a beautiful riverfront promenade: Malecon 2000, green areas, and modern shopping arcades that attract tourism from inside and outside the country.
